

Wine growers John and Allison Santos of Curry Creek Vineyards, located in Hector, NY, express their passion for wine through their skill in the vineyard. Pinot Gris is an infrequently grown grape in the Finger Lakes, with wine styles often akin to a light and fruity Pinot Grigio. This wine is very different. With small a crop, open canopy, and late season hang time, this wine is rich and mouthfilling.

Delicate and expressive. Aromas of ginger, pear, honeysuckle and stone fruit (peach, apricot) fill in the background of an understated, but complex palate. This wine shows great balance expressing spice and minerality while remaining fruit focused. The nose is complex, carried by moderate alcohol gentle sweetness. More lean and dry than you might expect from a big Alsatian Pinot Gris, and much more rich, complex and mouth filling than you would ever find in a Pinot Grigio.

2007 Vintage - Wine Spectator - 89 Points

Light and elegant, but with deceptive concentration to the yellow apple, blanched almond, honeysuckle and mineral notes. Nice length and freshness on the finish. Drink now through 2010. Tasted twice, with consistent notes. (WS - James Molesworth, February 2009)

2008 Vintage - Wine Spectator - 88 points

Ripe, pure and focused, with delicious salted butter, yellow apple and melon rind notes that stay bright and stylish on the finish. (WS - James Molesworth, 12/31/2010)
